TENTH ANNUAL

Celebrate the Music

Mountain Music School is a unique educational program that offers opportunities for students age ten and older to experience traditional Appalachian old-time music in a fun, enriching, and supportive environment.

Launched in 2004, the school was created to address a growing concern that traditional mountain music was not being passed down to the youth of Southwest Virginia. Today, the school has grown to include more than 100 students of all ages, many of whom travel from throughout the country to participate.

Preserve the Tradition

Each year during the last week in July, students gather on the campus of Mountain Empire Community College to explore the unique music, dance, and culture of our region.

Students can choose basic or advanced instruction in an instrument of their choice, including fiddle, claw hammer banjo, guitar, mandolin, dog house bass, dulcimer, autoharp or string band. The school provides instruments for loan if needed. Classes are taught by skilled, encouraging instructors who are masters at their craft.

Free musical performances are held each day featuring the region's most talented performers. Students may also participate in afternoon workshops including mountain dance, harmony singing, and vocals. The week's learning culminates in a jam session highlighting the musical accomplishments of our students.

Enroll Today

Join us for a week of music, mountains, and memories where generations come together to celebrate the unique richness and beauty of Appalachian culture.

Tuition for Mountain Music School is $150 for adults and children. Youth students can qualify for full or partial tuition scholarship by completing the scholarship application form. Tuition includes lunch, snacks, and a Mountain Music School t-shirt. A limited number of instruments are available for loan by request. Class size is limited, so early registration is encouraged.
